Handwriting Analysis

"Ink reveals intent."

OVERVIEW

This workshop trains participants in the fundamentals of handwriting analysis for security, forensic, and investigative purposes. It focuses on detecting forged signatures, identifying authorship, and using handwriting as supporting evidence in criminal and civil cases. Participants will gain the ability to evaluate writing samples critically and contribute to document authentication, identity verification, and investigative profiling. The training is grounded in forensic principles, ensuring its relevance in both law enforcement and judicial contexts.

Audience

Designed for forensic investigators, law enforcement personnel, document examiners, intelligence officers, and professionals involved in security screening, fraud detection, or criminal investigations. It is particularly useful for those handling written threats, disputed documents, or signature verification.

Instructors

Led by certified forensic document examiners, handwriting analysts, and law enforcement experts with field and courtroom experience. Instructors provide technical expertise, case-based learning, and practical guidance in applying handwriting analysis to real investigative challenges.
