OVERVIEW

This workshop equips participants with a clear understanding of how cyber warfare is reshaping international law, military doctrine, and global security policy. It provides conceptual clarity and strategic insight into how states conduct cyber operations, how international norms are evolving, and what legal and political mechanisms are available for accountability, cooperation, or deterrence in the digital battlespace.

Audience

Designed for diplomats, defense officials, international lawyers, cybersecurity strategists, intelligence professionals, policy advisors, military officers, and scholars in the fields of international relations, conflict studies, and digital law.

Instructors

Led by experts in international humanitarian law, cyber conflict analysts, former diplomats involved in cyber norms negotiations, and military officers with experience in cyber strategy. Instructors blend legal, technical, and geopolitical perspectives with case-based analysis.
