OVERVIEW

This workshop equips managers and HR professionals to lead diverse teams with fairness and cultural sensitivity while maintaining high performance. Participants will gain tools to evaluate performance transparently, deliver feedback across cultures, and build development plans that reflect both individual needs and institutional priorities. By understanding how culture shapes motivation and expectations, leaders will enhance trust, accountability, and productivity in international and multicultural environments.

Audience

Designed for team leaders, department heads, HR professionals, expatriate managers, and institutional decision-makers managing multicultural or multinational teams. Particularly valuable for those working in international organizations, global companies, development agencies, or multicultural government institutions.

Instructors

Led by intercultural management experts, international HR specialists, leadership coaches, and organizational psychologists with deep experience in performance systems, diversity management, and inclusive workplace strategy. Instructors combine evidence-based frameworks with lived practice in culturally complex organizations.
