Rule of Law Formation

OVERVIEW

This workshop equips legal professionals, policymakers, and governance reformers with the conceptual and practical tools to support rule-of-law development. It emphasizes how law, when grounded in legitimacy and fairness, can serve as the backbone of stable, just, and democratic societies. Participants will explore the historical evolution and core principles of the rule of law, including equality before the law, legal certainty, access to justice, separation of powers, judicial independence, and accountability of public authorities. The training also covers the roles of constitutional frameworks, legal institutions (judiciary, legislature, civil society), and international actors in promoting or undermining rule-of-law systems.

Audience

Designed for judges, prosecutors, legal scholars, constitutional advisors, civil servants, civil society leaders, UN and NGO rule-of-law actors, diplomats, and government officials engaged in justice reform, governance, or post-conflict institution-building.

Instructors

Led by constitutional law experts, international rule-of-law advisors, legal reform practitioners, and political scientists with field experience in state-building, judicial reform, and legal capacity development. Instructors bridge theory with practice in complex legal environments.
