OVERVIEW

This workshop equips legal professionals, compliance officers, HR managers, and institutional leaders with the knowledge to implement and support whistleblower protection systems. It emphasizes the importance of legal clarity, secure reporting mechanisms, and leadership commitment in fostering ethical behavior and internal accountability. Participants will learn how to align national and organizational practices with global whistleblower standards and how to respond effectively to disclosures while protecting the whistleblower, the institution, and the integrity of the investigative process.

Audience

Designed for compliance officers, legal advisors, HR professionals, internal auditors, ethics committee members, regulators, NGO representatives, and public officials responsible for integrity systems. It is especially relevant for those implementing internal reporting mechanisms, designing governance policies, or operating in environments vulnerable to corruption or abuse.

Instructors

Led by legal experts in whistleblower protection, governance and ethics advisors, former compliance officers, and institutional integrity specialists. Instructors bring both legal insight and operational experience in creating safe reporting environments and managing complex whistleblowing cases within national and international frameworks.
